Laparoscopic surgery for pelvic floor disorders

Alexander Rickert, Peter Kienle

Abstract

Pelvic floor disorders are different dysfunctions of gynaecological, urinary or anorectal organs, which can present as incontinence, outlet-obstruction and organ prolapse or as a combination of these symptoms. Pelvic floor disorders affect a substantial amount of people, predominantly women.

Transabdominal procedures play a major role in the treatment of these disorders.

With the development of new techniques established open procedures are now
