Endoscopic hemostasis state of the art - Nonvariceal bleeding

Stefan Karl Gölder, Juliane Brückner, Helmut Messmann

Abstract

New endoscopic techniques for hemostasis in nonvariceal bleeding were introduced and known methods further improved. Hemospray and Endoclot are two new compounds for topical treatment of bleeding. Initial studies in this area have shown a good hemostatic effect, especially in active large scale oozing bleeding e.g. tumor bleedings. For further evaluation larger prospective studies comparing the substantiated with other methods of endoscopic hemostasis are needed. For localized active arterial bleeding primary injection therapy in the area of bleeding as well as in
