Rare presentation of intralobar pulmonary sequestration associated with repeated episodes of ventricular tachycardia

D Sheshagiri Rao, Ramachandra Barik

Abstract

Arterial supply of an intralobar pulmonary sequestration (ILS) from the coronary circulation is extremely rare. A significant coronary steal does not occur because of dual or triple sources of blood supply to sequestered lung tissue. We present a 60-years-old woman who presented to us with repeated episodes of monomorphic ventricular tachycardia(VT) in last 3 months. Radio frequency ablation was ineffective. On evaluation, she had right lower lobe
