Acquired aortocameral fistula occurring late after infective endocarditis: An emblematic case and review of 38 reported cases

Salah AM Said, Massimo A Mariani

Abstract

Acquired aortocameral fistulas (ACF) occurring late after infective endocarditis of the aortic valve (AV) are sporadically reported. A review of the literature regarding congenital and acquired ACF secondary to iatrogenic or infectious disorders is conducted to delineate their features and current therapeutic options. From a PubMed search using the term "aortocameral fistula", 30 suitable papers for the
