Abstract

AIM

To describe the clinical and echocardiographic features of Nigerian children with Transposition of the great arteries and emphasize the need for collaboration with cardiac centres in the developed countries to be able to salvage the children.

METHODS

Prospective and cross sectional involving consecutive patients diagnosed with transposition of the great arteries using clinical evaluation and echocardiography at the Paediatric Department of Lagos State University Teaching Hospital, Lagos Nigeria as part of a large study between January 2007 and December 2015.

RESULTS

There were 51 cases of TGA within ²the study period with a male to female ratio of 2:1 and a prevalence of 1.55 per 10,000 among population of children who presented to centre during the study. Its proportion amongst children with congenital heart
