Video recording of neonatal resuscitation: A feasibility study to inform widespread adoption

Sandesh Shivananda, Jennifer Twiss, Enas el-Gouhary, Salhab el-Helou, Connie Williams, Prashanth Murthy P, Gautham Suresh

Abstract

AIM: To determine the feasibility of introducing video recording (VR) of neonatal resuscitation (NR) in a perinatal centre

METHODS: This was a prospective cohort quality improvement study on preterm infants and their caregivers. Based on evidence and experience of other centers using VR intervention, a contextually relevant implementation and evaluation strategy was designed in the planning phase. The components of intervention were pre-resuscitation team huddle, VR of NR and video debriefing (VD), all occurring on the same day. Various domains of feasibility and sustainability as well as feasibility criteria were predefined. Data for analysis was collected using quantitative and qualitative methods.
