

Patients were not required to give informed consent to the study, because the data used in this study were all anonymous, which were not involved in the patients' privacy information, they were obtained after each patient agreed to treatment by written consent.