

The requirement for informed consent was waived because our study does not invade personal privacy and has little risk to patients.