SPECIFIC COMMENTS TO AUTHORS

The manuscript describe a case of gastric Ewing sarcoma that was managed surgically. The case is important and interesting. The manuscript needs thorough revision for grammatical errors. Comments: -Was vagotomy done in the patient to prevent marginal ulceration? -What is the advantage of getting both CE USG and CECT scan in this patient? -Would EUS-FNAC have helped in establishing the diagnosis before surgery? -Please elaborate the current status of radiotherapy in extraosseous ES in the discussion section. -Other comments and suggestions are attached in the file.

SPECIFIC COMMENTS TO AUTHORS

In this manuscript, a case of primary gastric Ewing sarcoma is presented. The topic is interesting to attract the reader's attention, particularly pathologists. The following revisions are recommended; 1. Clinicopathologic, immunohistochemical, and molecular findings of previously reported cases should be summarized in a Table. 2. The authors should revise some spelling errors. 3. The manuscript should include a color figure of FISH, demonstrating EWS-FLI1 gene translocation. 4. In the discussion section, other small cell tumors in the pathological differential diagnosis of this rare tumor should be described in detail.
