SPECIFIC COMMENTS TO AUTHORS

This case report is potentially interesting. However, the whole volume of description is too large which should be much reduced concisely. 1. Particularly in discussion section, there was too much well-known and unnecessary general information. This section should be rewritten focusing on their novel findings. General information should be limited. 2. The authors should review previous reports of lupus enteritis and discuss their patient compared to that of previously reported patients. 3. I know that lupus enteritis presented with the other organ damage such as lupus cystitis. Thus, further follow-up should be needed in this patient. This issue should be clearly stated in the main text and abstract.
