SPECIFIC COMMENTS TO AUTHORS

The authors report a national survey from Islamic religious officials to evaluate the attitudes, knowledge levels and behaviors toward organ donation and transplantation. The manuscript described the situation of Islamic religious in the field of organs transplantation. Although the paper provides information about the attitude of Islamic religious in Turkey regarding organ transplantation, the paper might only draw a little attention of global reader. There are also few concerns about the manuscript. 1. As we know, all kind of religion is based on the kindness, help each other and harmony. However, mild disparity could be existed because of culture, nation, and region even under a same religion. Therefore, the attitude of Islamic religion in Turkey might be not the same as other countries or regions such as Indonesia, and Middle East countries et al. Can the author comment on this? 2. It would be great the authors could provide some information regarding current situation of organ donation and transplantation by different organs in Turkey. 3. Meanwhile, the prevalence of deceased organ donation in Turkey now would be helpful as well.
