SPECIFIC COMMENTS TO AUTHORS

Dear authors Thank you for your extremely rare case report. But this paper has several points described below. Major points How could the authors diagnose this tumor as pancreatic origin. Authors should describe the pathological findings differentiating pancreatic origin from head and neck origin. Authors expressed the tumor in the perinephric space. Table 1 clearly showed the tumor location of the extra pancreatic tissues thus far reported. Although it seems to be difficult to point out in what organ or tissue the tumor developed, authors at least discuss this point. Minor points Figure 1: The enhancement of the tumor seems stronger in Fig. 1D than in Fig. 1C. Legend of the Figure 2: The expression of “a hypointense signal mass” is not correct. Figure A shows a hyperintense mass. Legend of the Figure 3: forchromogranin A→for chromogranin
