SPECIFIC COMMENTS TO AUTHORS

This article on a pretty uncommon / rare case of a primary paranasal lymphoma. Authors have made good efforts to refer appropriate literature to write this manuscript. I thank them for bringing this to the attention. However, there are many grammatical errors with repetition. Although as per the report, it was a primary lymphoma in the nasal sinus, authors should consider discussing post splenectomy secondary malignancies (note this patient had prior splenectomy), where a patient can develop NHL, myelodysplasia etc. Author should look at histology of the removed spleen and add a comment as well.

It would be more reasonable if there were genetic test results.

SPECIFIC COMMENTS TO AUTHORS

This is an interesting case report of lymphoma of maxillary sinus with multiple metastasis including uncommon cutaneous areas. The following point is suggested for further consideration. 1. Please discuss the possibility for T cell origin as well as for the sinus/nasal origin. 2. Immunohistochemical staining of T cell marker would need also be used for confirmative diagnosis.
