COMMENTS TO AUTHORS

The case report by Iida T and co-workers describes a rare case of ANCA-related vasculitis with pancreatic involvement. This is an interesting and well written case report. I have only one minor comment: could the authors explain the relatively long observation period between May 2014 (trend of improvement) and re-admission in January 2015?

COMMENTS TO AUTHORS

Introduction is nice Case report is very well written. As you perfectly explained not to have a biopsy is a problem for being a perfect case Discussion I enjoy reading discussion and how you are excluding other diagnosis. I would like that you include the words used in Pubmed search Possible mistake in reference 17 (name is written twice). Figures: in pdf they are not very high quality images. Legend figures: a little bit long. Tables: 1. Normal values should be included. Different values in text and table. Please check it. 2. You should make nicer and easy to read.

COMMENTS TO AUTHORS

The current case report and review of literature presents data concerning pancreatic lesions based on ANCA-related vasculitis. It is a well-constructed case report and a short but good review of the corresponding literature.
