much difference is seen in the macrovascular maladies. Although the manuscript has delivered important clinical message and should be of great interest to the readers, several factors limit the publication of the paper in its current form. 1. The different methods of screening were used in the different studies including risk score, fasting plasma glucose, HbA1c concentrations or tests for oral glucose tolerance. Did these differences cause the different results in the different studies? Authors should discuss it in the article. 2. More relevant studies should be introduced and discussed in the article for powerfully supporting their results.
