SPECIFIC COMMENTS TO AUTHORS

Surely the authors introduced an very important branch of gastric cancers, including the molecular mechanisms, pathogenesis, and management. Just after described these profiles of three kind of rare cancers, you should rationally pose some potential or promising advice for cancer management, this should be the most key part of this review article, in that, as you described, any of these three kind of cancers were exactly difficult to be distinguished from common types gastic cancers, even from themself each other, in terms of their complicated phenotypes and crossingly confused pathology characteristics.
