The manuscript is well performed and the results are presented clearly. The reference section is adequate and relevant. The authors should include a short paragraph regarding the clinical or research implications of the finding of the study.

This is an interesting manuscript about the effect of right and left ear caloric test on the cardiac sympathovagal tone in healthy persons. The data demonstrated that minimal ice water caloric stimulation of the right and left vestibular system did not affect the cardiac sympathovagal balance according to HRV indices. This manuscript is nicely structured and well written. However, I have one minor comment about this manuscript. Please consider the following comments. (Comment) 1. Page 9, lines 3-5 I think, as for Table 2, the authors should describe whether the data is statistically significantly different between groups.
