- It is an interesting case presented, as long as there are only a few reported with zosteriform distribution. To see also the reports from 2013 with the capsicum topical treatment and 2007 with doxazosin per os. - Arfan-ul-Bari1Zosteriform cutaneous leiomyoma: a rare cutaneous neoplasm. J Coll Physicians Surg Pak. 2013 Aug;23(8):586-7. doi: 08.2013/JCPSP.586587. - Chaves AJ1, Fernández-Recio JM, de Argila D, Rodríguez-Nevado I, Catalina M. [Zosteriform cutaneous leiomyoma. Satisfactory treatment with oral doxazosin]. Actas Dermosifiliogr. 2007 Sep;98(7):494-6. REPLY : These references have been cited.
- Provide the response of patient to treatment (nifedipine). The patient is under followup. The pain has decreased to a significant extent. However, the lesions are not responding. The patient is quite happy with the diminution in pain.
- It is an interesting case report. Minor changes are necessary. Done
- Interesting case and well written The case is not really that rare The quality of the clinical and histological images is a bit of a concern. Do the authors have alternate images? I am extremely sorry to state that we don't have better images. What was the response to nifedipine in this patient? What exactly is the 'bystander effect' phenomena? It was a typographical mistake and the statement has been removed from the manuscript Was worsening of pain with cold elicited? Yes, worsening was elicited

3 References and typesetting were corrected
