Esophagitis and its causes: who is "guilty" when acid is found "not guilty" ?

L. Grossi, A.F. Ciccaglione, L. Marzio

The English style of the paper has been fully reviewed by Dr. Sonia Toracchio. Sonia Toracchio received her Ph.D. in clinical and basic science studies, primarily in the field of gastroenterology, microbiology and molecular biology, from the "G. d'Annunzio" University, Chieti, Italy in 2003. She was awarded a fellowship from the Italian Foundation for Cancer Research for cancer research study abroad. Following her fellowship, Dr. Toracchio continued to work at Baylor College of Medicine, Houston, TX (USA) as postdoctoral researcher. In July 2008 she received a two-year postdoctoral fellowship from a training program supported by the National Institutes of Health. After completing her fellowship, she joined the faculty at Baylor College of Medicine, Houston, TX (USA) as an Assistant Professor in the Department of Medicine, Section of Gastroenterology in 2010. She subsequently returned to Italy and is currently a Study Coordinator/Data Manager in the Addarii-Zamagni Medical Oncology Unit, Clinical Trials Office at St. Orsola-Malpighi Polyclinic, Bologna. Her primary research interests focus on human polyomaviruses, Helicobacter pylori, and human cancer. She is the author of 15 scientific articles, 8 of which as first author, indexed in PUBMED, and more than 30 abstracts. The above mentioned competences make Dr. Sonia Toracchio a full expert of English language and we are honoured of her contribution in reviewing of the English style of the manuscript. Finally, the English revision by Dr Toracchio resulted useful and well accepted in previous manuscripts submissions, also for your journal (e.g. manuscript N 19938 WJPT, 2015 by L. Grossi et al.)
